WHY SUPPORT CHARACTER EDUCATION?

Students collecting books for new babies in their community.

In schools of character, teachers and administrators work together with parents and community members to positively shape the social, emotional and character development of young people. Here students feel safe, respected and connected to those around them, allowing them to thrive academically and socially, and are motivated to give back to their communities. Since these students are the future workforce, businesses have a vested interest in seeing them develop into responsible, principled and ethical people.

WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING:

“It is our challenge to see that the character-changing experiences that our children have are positive ones. As a state representative, I have been, and will continue to be, an advocate for character education.”

- Representative Dean Urdahl

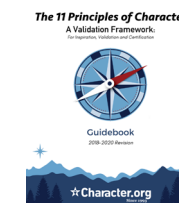

“I am here to testify that following the 11 Principles of character education will yield much more than positive results in student behavior, school climate and academic performance. Following the 11 Principles will positively transform every facet of your school or district.”

- Karen Rusthoven, Founder, Community of Peace Academy (2003, 2014, 2019 National School of Character)
